Exploitation of labour (or labor) is the act of treating one's workers unfairly for one's own benefit. It is a social relationship based on an asymmetry in a power relationship between workers and their employers. When speaking about exploitation, there is a direct affiliation with consumption in social theory and traditionally this would label exploitation as unfairly taking advantage of ...

In many countries, the garment industry is the largest employer in manufacturing. However, garment workers are often informally employed and home-based—thus invisible and rarely represented in national statistics (Chen, Sebstad, and O'Connell 1999). In Thailand, the garment industry is the largest export industry, accounting for 60 per cent of total exports (NSO 2012).
