Just watched Into the Spider-Verse, and I have to say that I love Peni Parker's "anime mech aesthetic." People will say "Japan's not futuristic anymore," "they still use fax machines," "their electronics have been beat by America and South Korea" yet the alternate Spider-(person) incarnation from the year 3145 with a spider-mech is a Japanese-American anime girl.

Spider-Man: Into The Spider-Verse is out today, and it's an absolute gem -- not just in terms of story and art style, but also in the way that it introduces lesser-known characters like Spider-Gwen, Spider-Man Noir, and Spider-Ham to a wider audience. There's also Peni Parker, a character who differs from the rest of the Spider-Fam in a pretty significant way: She doesn't have spider abilities ...
