Crowdsourcing, open data, labour, and precarity. We have many labour and economics issues to work through in the cultural heritage field. The way we speak about our work (“we couldn’t run without our volunteers” and “let’s get the public involved”) indicates (to me) that we’ve given up on sources of funding adequate to the labour costs that would be required for libraries and ...

Precarious work is a term that critics of globalization use to describe non-standard employment that is poorly paid, insecure, unprotected, and cannot support a household. From this perspective, globalization, the shift from the manufacturing sector to the service sector, and the spread of information technology have created a new economy which demands flexibility in the workplace, resulting ...

From the perspective of different sections of capital, shares of world exports provide a crude indication of divisions of labour. Table 2 shows that China has made significant gains in capturing a share of world exports in iron and steel, clothing and integrated circuits and electronic components, but has had little penetration in medium technology (automotives) or high technology ...

“This is a vital contribution to the growing debate around free time and reducing the working week. With millions saying they would like to work shorter hours, and millions of others without a job or wanting more hours, it’s essential that we consider how we address the problems in the labour market as well as preparing for the future challenges of automation.”

Introduction: the year of poverty porn. 1.1 2013 was the year when public debate about the welfare state apparently exploded - in the form of a new genre of television which has been tagged 'poverty porn'. In July, and as part of its The Cost of Living season, the BBC broadcast We Pay Your Benefits (BBC 1, 2013), a programme which invited four 'taxpayers' to analyse the spending habits of four ...

Manning the lifeline. Fabienne Leonhart, 43, is a volunteer at Suicide Ecoute, the only suicide hotline in France that is open 24 hours, 7 days a week, throughout the entire year. We spent about 45 minutes on the phone this evening, during which her kind, grandmotherly voice carried me through the ins and outs of the tense and occasionally disturbing occupation of listening to suicidal people.
