Property rights are theoretical socially-enforced constructs in economics for determining how a resource or economic good is used and owned. Resources can be owned by (and hence be the property of) individuals, associations or governments. Property rights can be viewed as an attribute of an economic good. This attribute has four broad components and is often referred to as a bundle of rights:

Following White (1974), a precise definition of vulnerability was given by Turner et al. (2003) and used by Schröter et al. (2005) to assess the vulnerability of Europe faced with global change. Vulnerability is a function of three elements: exposure, sensitivity and adaptive capacity. In this context, we used the ratio of the economic value of insect pollination to the economic value of the ...
