What a great post. I can join the chorus of those who did graduate work in education, although I was looking at the university level. I particularly like this bit: Our purposes are first things, he says, and without attending to these things, "we are more often preoccupied with simply getting through the days and weeks."

Philosophy (from Greek φιλοσοφία, philosophia, literally "love of wisdom") is the study of general and fundamental questions about existence, knowledge, values, reason, mind, and language. Such questions are often posed as problems to be studied or resolved. The term was probably coined by Pythagoras (c. 570 - 495 BCE). Philosophical methods include questioning, critical discussion ...
